These are regional words for a festival in French. You'll notice that in Belgium they have two words: "ducasse" mostly heard in the West and "kermesse" mostly used in the South and East.

Actually the Walloon word is "dicâce" (similar to French "ducasse"), from Latin "dedicatio" (dedication of a church to a specific saint). It was originally used for parish festivals.

The English word in Wisconsin is "kermis", which is a Dutch word from which the French "kermesse" derives. When speaking in Walloon in Wisconsin “grande fiesse" is used to refer to a kermis.
